

Highlights

Highlights

- Tested agreement attraction in Turkish using speeded acceptability.
- Verbal attractors with phonological overlap did not induce attraction.
- Genitive plural nouns induced robust agreement attraction effects.
- Attraction depends on abstract controller features, not surface form.
- Results challenge purely phonological accounts of agreement attraction.