

Highlights

Highlights

- Tested whether phonological modulation penetrates memory retrieval for agreement.
- Verbal attractors with surface overlap did not induce agreement attraction.
- Genitive plural nouns induced robust attraction, unlike verbal homophones.
- Phonological overlap alone does not modulate dependency resolution.
- Memory access is gated by abstract controller potential, not surface form.